

DCI DB Expo

by S. Schluederberg

Completely touring the two full floors of exhibits in the DCI Database and Client/Server World Exhibition was a nearly impossible task. Everyone got their daily dose of exercise cruising the aisles—collecting knowledge.

The DCI discussion sessions were open to the registrants of the MTA Conference and covered a wide breadth of technology. A common focus of the conferences was the issue of coping with the Y2K (year 2000) problems. Attendees were seen on the phones back to the office alerting their management to the emergent nature of this problem.

Discussion sessions pinpointed potential pitfalls for participants while also providing tips for solving impending problems. A reminder to those of you who did not attend—time is running out!

(Excerpt from the M Bostonian Newsletter page)